

To: FCC
Re: Federal No Call List

I implore you to establish a Federal Do No Call List. Fortunately, I live in a state that has a "No Call List". It has drastically reduced the number of unwanted, annoying sales calls. But the key word is "reduced" not eliminated. The state law is not broad enough. It continues to allow political organizations, "not-for-profit" organizations, insurance companies and any one conducting a survey to continue to invade the privacy of our home. The adaptive nature of telemarketers means they are constantly thinking of new ways to get around the law. Now I get calls from companies who only want to "conduct a survey" or "make an appointment". Technically they are not breaking the law but their purpose is still to sell me something. I know the law and exercise the right to protect my privacy but there are people who are easy targets and the unscrupulous telemarketer quickly moves on to them. They make billions of dollars a year from unsuspecting and uninformed consumers and these predatory individuals use the phone as a foot hold into their homes. In fact, these disturbances can compromise the safety and security of our society. These unwanted interruptions dilute the quality of our life and cost billions of dollars in wasted time and resources, create infinite amounts of aggravation and frustration and undermine our sense of security in our home. Please consider the establishment of a Federal regulation that would stop these unwanted marketing assaults!